

BIRD SEED

Millets for bird seed are almost all produced in dryland farming districts. The seasonal conditions necessary for millets are almost identical with those required for grain sorghum. As with many less significant crops there is a trend for a small number of farmers on adjoining properties to adopt similar cropping practices so that a "millet area" is established. Seed millets are largely grown on the border region between Queensland and NSW.